

The truth is as long as you're spending away your valuable time on social media or watching videos you don't have control over your time. I think you will probably see by now how dispensing your energy can lead to so many negative influences. One bad habit occupying long enough in your head can produce all those evil thoughts. Discipline your mind and body, control your attention and thoughts is the only answer to counter attack this problem. Instead of letting the flow of time be your enemy, take advantage of it and use the opportunity to build something valuable. Castles are not built in one day, skyscrapers took many years to accomplish. Those people use time as a tool to produce extraordinary products. You will never control time and therefore you should not be bothered about it. What you can control is how you spend your time, that is completely in your control. You are not losing control of your time, however you are simply wasting it. You are interpreting this experience as a loss. You can change it my friend.
