

Do you have tendency of comparing yourself to others?

Yes I do. Especially when I use social media I encounter many people who are great at what I'm trying to do. For example, speaking English and living in developed countries. Okay great I like your openness. But your starting in life and theirs are not the same, it just like comparing a diamond with a marble stone. They both have different values. In order to make it more sensible, have a look to those people who had similar experiences with you. Your childhood friends, your high school friends are they better than you? Have they reached far in life compared to you? Not exactly.

You are the hardest working man in your class and you are growing very fast because you have gone through a lot of tough time and you always become a better person. Therefore I want to remind you that if you can concentrate your forces into becoming exactly the person you want, you will definitely become him. So pay the price, work hard and don't dispense your forces.